Military mail from Upper Hungary is substantially more difficult to find than from Transylvania and the Bacska. The above example was cancelled with the civil postmark of Losonc at the time of the takeover of Ruthenia.

Although the Hungarians prepared special Liberation postmarks for a handful of the largest towns, there were many more post offices in the recovered territory. Not wanting to continue the use of the old Czechoslovak markings, a series of numbered (from 101 to 306) postmarks was prepared for temporary use. These were made of rubber and inscribed "Magyar Kir. Posta (Royal Hungarian Posts)." Examples shown above were used in Ipolyvarbo (Vrbovka) and Totgyarmat (Slovenske Darmoty). Lower cover received in Lusonc on 27 November.

Although the numbered post offices did not have registry labels, customers could send registered mail. Upper cover from Vsely (Zelovce) was backstamped on arrival in Lusonc on 22 November. Czechoslovak franking as shown on lower example from Csisco (Cicov) to Vienna continued to be accepted until 25 November at 1 Czech crown = 14 filler.

In due course, some of the numbered post offices acquired cancels with temporary place names pending the receipt of a standard metal cds. In this case, the name (Sajogomor = Gemer) and date were applied to the stamp as well as the 289 numerical postmark. Only example of such usage from Upper Hungary known to exhibitor.

A new steel cds was provided for dozens of smaller post offices in Upper Hungary, restoring the pre-1918 town names. A selection of these showing different usages and franking is provided on the this and subsequent pages. Both covers here have 1.20 pengo postage for international registered letters. Felsoszeli was called Horni Saliby by the Czechoslovaks, but Galanta retained the same name.

In 1939, a special "Golden Train" toured Upper Hungary with a car decorated in gold leaf (see picture postcard). It was considered one of the most important historical and religious symbols of Hungary as it contained the holy relic of the preserved right hand of St. Stephen. As the train stopped in the various towns, a special postmark was provided for visitors.
